

Tragic Campus Romances Studied In Deaths Of Eight Girls

Parisgrafs LOCALLY SPEAKING

"In every work that he began
he did it with all his heart—and prospered."

Here are some figures on the work of the county home demonstration agent which furnish further evidence that this is as essential as any other educational activities being carried on in Lamar county, including the school system.

The women and girls year round garden organization in Lamar county during the past year grew, saved and used vegetables worth nearly $30,000. The girls poultry clubs produced eggs and poultry used at home and sold, worth about $1,000.

The pantry demonstration women and girls' clubs put up 134,297 quarts of fresh fruit, vegetables, meats, pickles, relishes, etc. The canned value of these products amounted to $55,291.31. In addition fruits and vegetables brined and dried weighed 16,640 pounds, valued at $2,704.13. They cured 93,005 pounds of meat worth $13,990.75. The total value of all food preservation by these women and girls was $11,986.19. This is more than twice the value of the food preservation in 1930.

This however represents only a small portion of the work that has been done in the county. As evidence consider the fact that the home demonstration department was instrumental in putting out six car loads of cans and 5,275 fruit jars in the county. A complete report throughout the county is not available but this gives some idea of what is going on in raising and conserving foods.

Then there is the girls club which includes the making of clothing, home improvements, etc., which is of tremendous value to every wife and daughter of Lamar county farmers.

Home demonstration work was carried on in 29 communities in Lamar county during 1931 in addition to the work done in unorganized communities. The members of these clubs have carried the work to other women and girls. An example is seen in the case of two women who assisted 171 people to conserve 13,546 containers of food.

The total value of the women's and girls' club work in Lamar county of which there is a record amounts to $102,969.26. Surely this figure should convince the most skeptical that the small amount of money Lamar county puts into the work is certainly well expended. However, we are glad to observe that there appear to be few if any who do not fully appreciate the value of this work.

Miss Lida Cooper, our home demonstration agent, is a most efficient one. She goes about her work quietly with no idea of personal glory or honor. She loves the work for the work's sake and the good it does. She is entitled to and should receive the full support and co-operation of every organization and each individual citizen in the county.

At a meeting of the Lions club Thursday Miss Cooper presented two women and two girls who are active in club work, and to a man the Lions were impressed with the value of the work as it was outlined by these four club members. President Goolsby said it was "undoubtedly the best program the Lions club has had in a year." A new vision and new determination to foster this work in an active way was given to this Paris service club.

The pasture will be scored in the morning at 9 o'clock, May 5.

JURY DEBATING MASSIE FATE IS WITHOUT VERDICT

Silence Broken As Seven of Nordic Blood Leave Others

HONOLULU, April 28. (AP)—A break in the inscrutable silence about the room in which 12 men labored to fix the fate of the four persons accused of lynching Joseph Kahahawai came late Thursday when the seven jurors of Nordic blood left their five colleagues to come out on a balcony and stand in a light rain.

Except for the racial makeup of those who emerged the act was not significant to watchers below. Those remaining in the jury room were three Chinese, one Hawaiian and a Portuguese. The seven stood in a little knot and conversed a few moments before returning but their words could not be distinguished.

The incident occurred near the end of the first 24 hours to elapse since the jury took the case.

Wife and Several Other Children Escape Injury

BEAUMONT, Tex., April 28. (AP)—Lightning killed Gilbert Moss, 30, and his one-year-old daughter on Thursday while the Moss family was seeking refuge from a threatening storm.

Mrs. Moss was carrying the baby's twin sister, and several other children, escaped injury.

Fear of an approaching storm caused the family to leave their home six miles south of Raywood in Liberty county and attempt to reach the home of a brother, Leonard Moss, before the storm broke.

Mrs. Moss was carrying the baby that was killed. Mrs. Moss, with the other baby, and the other children were following.

FIND COMMISSIONER GUILTY OF MURDER

Winkler County Man Sentenced to 20 Years' Imprisonment

MIDLAND, Texas, April 28. (AP)—After deliberating only two hours a district court jury here Thursday night convicted M. W. Wilson, Winkler county commissioner, of murder and sentenced him to 20 years' imprisonment. Wilson was indicted for the killing at Wink last October of W. M. "Blackie" Laughlin, alleged bootlegger. Wilson's counsel gave notice of appeal.

The defense contended that Wilson was a member of a raiding party and victim of circumstances. The prosecution claimed that the shooting ensued after Laughlin had refused to pay "protection money." W. R. Jennings, former Wink peace officer, was convicted in a companion case and sentenced to 35 years' imprisonment.

LEAVE CURRENCY ALONE IS PLEA MADE BY MEYER

Says Business Confidence Will Be Restored By This Assurance

"DEBASING CURRENCY CREATES DISTRUST"

Patman and Rankin, Cash Payment Sponsors, Listen to Plea

WASHINGTON, April 28 (AP)—Definite word to business that congress will "not tinker with the currency" was the terse formula for restoring confidence advanced Thursday by Eugene Meyer.

This advice was the kernel of more than two hours' testimony by the federal reserve board governor before the house ways and means committee and was directed against new-money plans for cashing the $2,400,000,000 soldiers' bonus.

"Will Drive Out Gold"
"Flood the country with undesirable currency and you will tend to drive out gold," Meyer said.

"Debasement of the currency will create distrust, disorganization in business, and difficulties of much greater than those we now face that I can not believe congress is going to do this. I can not believe any considerable part of the people will support a policy so contrary to the public interest."

Representative Patman, Democrat, Texas, and Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, chief sponsors of cash payment, were attentive listeners when Meyer concluded.

Rankin said in a statement: "The statements of Ogden L. Mills, secretary of the treasury, and Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve board, show that we are in the grip of a financial calam more vicious and more merciless than that from which Andrew Jackson wrested the country 160 years ago."

He made the trip in nine hours, three minutes, having left St. Hubert airport in Montreal at 9:22 a. m. Eastern Standard Time.

Reichers had explained that the length of the Montreal-Havana flight—1,736 miles—was approximately the same distance he would have to fly over water from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Ireland in the two-stop flight he plans to make to Paris.

WEARIED HOUSE APPROVES PARTS OF ECONOMY BILL

Designed to Save $25,000,000; Hoover Payless Furlough Opposed

WAGE CUT FOR ALL
PAID $2,500 VOTED

Action of Regulars Assures Saying of Twelve Millions For Bill

WASHINGTON, April 28. (AP)—Swinging behind its leaders, a weary house Thursday night approved sections in the economy bill designed to save $25,000,000.

Earlier it voted down the Hoover payless furlough plan and adopted an eleven per cent wage cut on all employees receiving more than $2,500.

Rally Against Insurgents
After a hectic day session, the members returned Thursday night to rally against efforts of insurgents to wipe out remains of the eleven per cent cut by a vote of 183 to 84. This assured a saving of about $12,000,000 for the bill.

They then turned to provisions restricting allowances and extra compensation for federal employees, estimated to save about $13,700,000, but only after the insurgent coalition had been broken down on numerous amendments.

Substitute Offered
The Hoover five-day week and furlough without pay plan, estimated to save about $2,000,000, was offered as a substitute to the emasculated McDuffie flat eleven per cent proposal, exempting $1,000. But it was defeated 179 to 156.

Before the house finished the wage-cut provision the bi-partisan opponents struck out the provision eliminating the Saturday half holiday for federal employees, estimated to save $9,000,000, by a vote of 141 to 118. Limitations of salaries of reconstruction finance corporation employees to a maximum of $10,000 also was approved.

CLARKVILLE FIRE DAMAGES BUILDING

Explosion Reveals Blaze of Undetermined Origin

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS
CLARKVILLE, April 28. — Fire originating from undetermined cause gutted the one-story brick warehouse at the rear of the Richmond Hardware store here on the east side of the square, the blaze being discovered when an explosion occurred about 9 p. m. Thursday and flames burst through the roof. The store shop to the west of the hardware store was filled with smoke, but the fire did not penetrate this building.

The forces of the explosion, thought to have been caused by ignition of paints and oils stored in the warehouse, burst the windows in the east wall, extending back of the Texas Power and Light company office, east of the hardware store.

Extent of the damage had not been estimated, the fire department being engaged about 45 minutes in getting the fire under control and preventing its spread.

The hardware business is operated by Mrs. Ray Malone Richmond, widow of Walter Richmond and the Style shop, by Mrs. A. M. Graves. Both buildings are owned by Mrs. H. L. Pearson.

HUSBAND OF 17 YEAR OLD BRIDE RELATES STORY

Authorities Conducting Investigation Blame Illegal Operation For Deaths

MURDER CHARGE IS FILED IN ONE CASE

Assistant County Attorney Gets Statement of 'Treatments' Given Girl

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 28. (AP)—Indignant forces of the law piled into tragic campus romances Thursday as they sought to fix the blame for the deaths of eight girls—two of them University of Oklahoma co-eds.

While Frank Lee, University athlete, related events leading up to the death of his 17 year old girl bride at an inquiry in Norman, other investigators declared the deaths of Mrs. Lee, formerly Nancy Jo Seay, and Virginia Wyckoff, another co-ed, were but two of eight caused by alleged illegal operations here in recent weeks.

Murder Charge Filed
A murder charge was filed on Thursday against Dr. J. W. Elsminger, Oklahoma City osteopath, in connection with the death of Miss Wyckoff, 21, University of Oklahoma student, who died on Saturday. He pleaded not guilty to arraignment before a justice of the peace and was ordered remanded to jail without bond pending a preliminary hearing May 6.

The charge was the second preferred in connection with the deaths. Dr. Richard E. Thacker, physician and surgeon, is sought on a charge of murder in the death last week of Miss Robbie Lou Thompson, 21, a telegraph company employee.

Statement Obtained
Thursday afternoon Raper Grigsby, assistant county attorney, said he had obtained an eight-page statement from the osteopath in which the latter was represented as describing "treatments" he administered the Myrick girl. The man denied he actually performed the operation.

Grigsby's investigation centered about a house in the northwest part of the city where the girl assertedly was taken. The osteopath said she came to the office with a youth who said he was her husband.

Search For Doctor

Search continued for Dr. Thacker, already charged with the murder of the telegraph company employee and named by Lee as the man whom "we went to see" when his bride, the former Nancy Jo Seay, became ill. He was reported seen in the northwest part of the state Wednesday night.

County Attorney Lewis R. Morris, joined by operatives of the state bureau of criminal investigation and university investigators headed by President W. B. Blizell of the school, sat in a university office and heard Lee's story.

Lee Tells Story
His eyes red from emotion, Lee, who drove all night from his bride's burial place at Bogham, Texas, told of the secret wedding February 2 at Wichita Falls, Texas, and declared "we returned to school and did not live together because we were afraid our folks" (Continued On Page Two)

STRATTON WILL FACE TOUGH FOE IN TUESDAY SHOW

"Chicago Strong Boy" to Meet Tulsa Grappler in Finish Match

Although Walter Stratton has been winning his wrestling matches rather consistently of late, he will have his work cut out for him here next week when he meets George Craig, Tulsa blacksmith, in the final event of an all-wrestling card arranged at the Paris Athletic club by Promoter Doc Gilman to be held Tuesday of next week.

Craig is known to be among the topnotchers in this section of the country, having turned in victories over such grapplers as Red Lyons, Silent Condell and others. He has also shown better than average ability when wrestling with Teddy Waters, and George Ligovsky and other good men. Although this is the Oklahoma's first appearance here, he is expected to establish a good following among local fans. His match with Stratton will be two out of three falls to a finish with no time limit.

The semi-final match will be a forty-five minute affair between Abe Morris, who wrestled here with Henry Steoff, and George Ligovsky the bearded Russian, who also has shown here.

In his match with Steoff Morris had little opportunity to show his ability, but from what local fans have seen of the whistled one the Pacific coast grappler will have no set-up Tuesday night. The Russian is a good man and will doubtless give Abe plenty of exercise.

The curtain raiser will be a 15 minute time limit match between two local boys, Nick Nicholson, 123, and Joe Binnion, 120. Gilman says both these boys are fast and have been training for some time. Though not in the professional class both have considerable knowledge of wrestling and are expected to put on a good match.

Mr. Gilman following a recent trip to Dallas, says he has arranged to bring several of the best men in the wrestling game here for future matches, including Sepp, Humberto, Billy Edwards, George Sauer and Red Lyons.

would have it annulled if they knew about it."

He went on to describe the illness of his bride last week; how "we worried about it a lot" and of the visit to Dr. Thacker's office here on the advice of student friends.

"We were both nervous; we did not know what we were doing," he declared. He told Morris the physician made no physical examination of the girl; that he (Lee) did not witness the operation himself.

Lee paid Dr. Thacker $30, he said, put his bride under the care of a nurse whom the physician suggested and returned to school.

Mrs. Lee became violently ill, was moved to a hospital and died there Monday night. The Wyckoff girl died at the same hospital this week.

Declaring his office was investigating alleged illegal operations even before the death of the two co-eds came to light Wednesday as a result of incomplete death certificates, County Attorney Morris declared early investigation had revealed several city homes have been used as hospitals for girls following the alleged operations.

Turning to the Wyckoff case, the prosecutor said he wished to talk to Evva Milne, a friend of the girl's family who conducted a cleaning shop next door to the Wyckoff dressmaking shop near the university campus. He said Milne, a former university student, was in Centerville, Iowa, where Miss Wyckoff's body was taken.

He also questioned several students and said he had been told Thacker's name is a familiar one in campus gossip.

Dr. Bizzell, concerned with the shocking aspects of the case, declared he intended "to get to the bottom of this matter."

At The Grand

Dashing and romantic with a strong and masculine appeal, John Darrow is rapidly gaining a huge fan following not only among the flappers, but among the general picture going public as well. In his most recent picture, "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room," now showing at the Grand Theatre last day he gives his best performance since he played the juvenile lead in "Hell's Angels."

In this all-talking modernized version of an old stage success, Darrow fills the dramatic role of Frank Slade, son of the saloon keeper. His characterization of the clean-cut young man, who, with love as the reward, makes a winning fight to escape the undermining influence of the bar-room, is admirably handled. As the sweetheart of the little school teacher Darrow is tender and appealing in striking contrast to the dynamic force of his performance in the intensely dramatic sequences in the saloon.

"The expending of funds is closely audited by an auditor who also audits the accounts of many of the largest business houses in Paris and this area.

"It is my opinion that all people applying for aid should be referred to the King's Daughters where is kept a card index file of all people who are worthy of it. I personally know of numerous cases being aided, and when I say aided, I mean just that. I do not mean that they are supporting them and encouraging and commercializing laziness, for that is not the effort of the King's Daughters. These ladies help in a material way and help their charges to procure employment when such can be had. A man or woman who is employed has more self-respect than a lazy, trifling person who does not even want to work. Benjamin Franklin said "The Lord helps him who helps himself." Therefore these ladies—the King's Daughters, the Lord's daughters are trying to help those who help themselves. Nothing is more fruitful, more elevating or more charitable than to emulate the Lord or King of Kings in the manner of His help.

"I believe so thoroughly in the good these ladies are doing that I give both of my time and all the money I can afford. Won't you give of your money just all you can?"

4-H Club Members Point Out Value Of Work At Lions Meet

WOMEN AND GIRLS TELL OF BENEFITS THEY EXPERIENCE

Miss Lida Cooper Puts on Program For Luncheon Thursday

A program designed to acquaint members of the Lions club with the work being done by the 4-H club in the county was put on by program chairman, Cam Hathaway at Thursday's meeting with the cooperation of Miss Lida Cooper, home demonstration agent who presented members Lamar 4-H clubs who have made outstanding records.

Four On Program

Appearing on the program were Miss Virginia Lee of Chillicothe, Miss Cora Lee Stevens of Post Oak both members of the girls' 4-H club in their communities and both winners of trips to the short course at College Station and to the Dallas fair. Representing the women's clubs were Mrs. Claude Duncan of Howland and Mrs. J. A. Lewis of Heaton who are also among the leaders in the club work.

"What 4-H Stands For" was the subject of a talk given by Miss Lee who explained that 4-H means "Head, Hand, Heart and Health." She explained how members of the club were taught to become home managers through instruction in the various tasks of homemaking. She called attention to the number of members in girls clubs in the county and explained how through the activities such as poultry raising, gardening, sewing and so forth the girls are enabled to realize actual profits from their work while learning the things that will make them better homemakers. She took occasion to thank the club for the part that it has annually in sending 4-H members to the short course.

Miss Stevens Talks

"I am glad I live in the farm, and I am glad that I am a 4-H member," declared Miss Cora Lee Stevens of the Post Oak club in a talk on "What the 4-H Club Means to Me". Miss Stevens has been a member of the 4-H club for four years and has won three trips to the Dallas State Fair through her work. "Before becoming interested in the 4-H club I was not interested in home work," she said. "But after joining the club I learned new methods of performing the tasks around the home and I learned to do things that I had not known about before."

"I do not know all about home-making yet, but I do know a lot more than I did, and when I have a home of my own the things I have learned through my club work will make me a better home manager than I could ever have been without this training."

Miss Stevens said that last year she raised a year round garden and that from the twenty varieties of vegetables produced in the garden she canned 440 quarts of vegetables. She has also raised chickens each year as one of her projects.

The Social Side

Speaking of the social side of the club work, Miss Stevens declared that the social contacts alone have been worth the efforts put forth. She said she had met people whom she otherwise would never have known and that the acquaintances thus formed she considered valuable.

The 4-H clubs have given farm women more confidence in themselves and have developed a spirit of cooperation among farm women. declared Mrs. Claude Duncan of Howland, who, speaking for the women's clubs, declared they have been of untold value to the county and to farm homes. Particular Mrs. Duncan said that farm women have always known how to get along without a great deal of money but that 4-H club work has taught them how to improve their homes, how to feed their families and how to dress themselves better and to get the most for the money they have to spend.

Active Five Years

"I just don't know how I ever managed before I became a member," declared Mrs. J. A. Lewis of the Heaton club, who for the past five years has been one of the most active club workers in the county. Mrs. Lewis said that in her community the negro women, teaching them how to can and keep various kinds of meats, vegetables and fruits until the pantries of many of their homes rival those of the club members themselves.

for their families at the lowest possible cost. Mrs. Lewis has a year round garden which keeps her family supplied with fresh vegetables at all times, she said. Her garden contains one half acre and she grew last year 23 varieties of vegetables. She canned 670 quarts of vegetables from the garden and in addition 123 quarts of fruit. Her family has been served with well balanced meals every day throughout the year, she said and during this time their grocery bill has averaged from $4 to $8 per month. Mrs. Lewis declared that she enjoys club work thoroughly and in addition to the more practical benefits she has received she has found much pleasure in the work and in the social contacts that she has formed.

Proceeding the program a gavel made by John Flick of Direct was presented the club by Dr. Goolsby, Lions president. The gavel was made by hand from cedar and box elder. It is beautifully carved and bears the Lions emblem.

The day's visitors included N. J. Howland of Dallas, Lewis Welkel of Paris, C. E. Duncan, Howland, Frank Hardenstein, Paris, and Mrs. J. M. Caviness of Paris.

NEW YORK, April 28. (AP)—A somewhat irregular opening was followed by a gradual decline in cotton Thursday, with selling becoming a little more active in the last hour owing to the weakness of the grain and stock markets.

July contracts broke to 6 1/2 in the late trading and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 10 to 12 points. Offerings continued light until near the close, when the sagging tendency indicated to bring in some liquidation, while the late weakness was attributed to the action of grain and stock markets.

The Garden club at its meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Scott Galbreath, planned its annual spring flower show for Friday, May 6 at the Masonic auditorium, and these officers were elected for the coming season: Mrs. E. B. Lowery, president (re-elected); Mrs. G. R. Hackel, first vice-president; Mrs. C. P. Floyd, second vice-president; Mrs. Marvin Sandberry, secretary; Mrs. Scott Galbreath, treasurer.

Mrs. Ed McDonald was welcomed into the club as a new member. Mrs. F. D. Mallory conducted the lesson, leading a questionnaire on better homes and gardens, and the papers were "Getting Acquainted With the Begonia Family" by Mrs. Frank Simmons and "How to Beautify Terrace Slopes" by Mrs. Tom Snell.

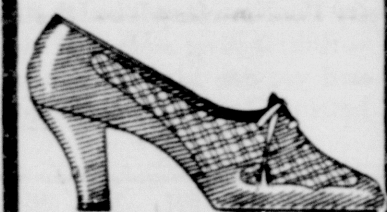

The next meeting of the club, on May 27, will be an open meeting, the members each being privileged to invite a guest. The place will be announced later.

The public is cordially invited to enter flowers in the show next Friday, and to attend the exhibit. As usual, exhibitors must furnish their own containers and be responsible for them, calling for them after the show at the Masonic auditorium. All flowers to be entered must be at the building before 9:30 a. m. First prizes in the different groups will range from 50 cents to $1 and ribbons will be awarded for second place.

This is the list of prizes for the best in each group, either single flowers, collections or pots, as indicated: 6 red roses; 6 pink roses; 6 white roses; 6 yellow roses; collection mixed roses, $1 each.

Girl Is Hurt In Auto Accident

Struck by an automobile as she stepped back from another car one mile west of Pattonville on Highway 49, Miss Dorothy Sullivan, 18, suffered a fractured shoulder and body bruises. She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital by ambulance late Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Selby Pierce, 522 Cleveland street, said her automobile struck Miss Sullivan when the girl stepped back from a car that had been parked on the side of the road. The accident occurred when the automobile pulled away from where Miss Sullivan was standing. Mrs. Pierce is principal of the Pattonville school.

MARKET MANAGER IS PRIZE WINNER

M. M. Petty, market manager for the local A and P store, recently won first place in a contest of all markets of the Dallas division, based on increased business for a period of four weeks.

The record was made in competition with markets in such towns as Tyler, Kilgore and Waco.

Mr. Petty and 19 other winners in the contest will be guests at a dinner given by the Dallas office soon.

H. Bradford, manager of the grocery department of the local A and P store was also entered in the grocery contest, but though he had a good increase of business, he missed placing.

Tom Hunter Will Talk at Blossom

Tom F. Hunter, candidate for governor, will speak from his automobile on the streets of Blossom at 2:30 Saturday afternoon.

Reduction of state taxes by the abolition or consolidation of many of the eighty bureaus, commissions and departments at Austin and by elimination of waste in the highway department, is Mr. Hunter's aim.

"There should be a state law," said Mr. Hunter, "which makes it penal offense for any state official to receive money or compensation from the corporations."

Schools Heated

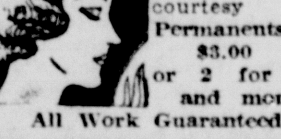

Because of the unusually cool weather Thursday, gas meters at the various school buildings of the city were cut on again Thursday afternoon, A. H. Chamness, superintendent of city schools said. Meters had been sealed for the season. All school buildings will be heated Friday, Mr. Chamness said.

BRITAIN ON THE UPGRADE

ALL observers agree that the backbone of adversity and pessimism has been broken in Great Britain. Many reasons are assigned for the change in British sentiment; but while the theorists argue about the weight of various factors in a complicated situation, the fact remains that confidence is returning, and throughout the kingdom a strong and optimistic movement is being felt. Sterling continues to improve, carrying with it the Scandinavian exchanges. Everyone is talking about the good times that are to be.

We in America can not help but rejoice to see this improvement. Anything that helps Great Britain is bound to help us. In the past, England has depended for prosperity chiefly on her commerce—her exports of manufactured goods, and her carrying trade. If she is the first nation to be able to break through the stagnation of the world buying market and get Europe, the Orient and South America to take her goods, she will help us in at least two ways. She will aid in restoring competition, which has been dead, in those markets, since any buying movement is bound to result in comparison between American and British goods. We shall take our competitive chance in the foreign market, and we have always had to take it; and if that market begins to buy, our chances are just as good as England's.

Indeed, it is a general law that trade generates trade, buying stimulates buying. The main thing is the restoration of confidence, of a psychology of optimism, which releases the spirit of man and gives it driving power. Business is international; it therefore makes no difference where this spirit takes hold and makes headway. If the British movement continues it will be good for the world and it will benefit us.

SUSPICION THE MOTHER OF WAR

THERE are in the United States at least 150 organizations with the avowed purpose of promoting international peace. A vast crop of these came into existence just at the close of the Great war and represent the determination so frequently expressed at the time to make sure that such a catastrophe should not occur again.

It is quite probable that most of these organizations have, if not their affiliated societies, at least their counterparts in most of the countries of Europe. They represent a tremendous sentiment, which grows at least as fast as the increase in population. And that sentiment is being fostered and kept keen by a huge volume of propaganda printing and speech-making.

With even more promise is the movement which is affecting the instruction in the public schools. Whether organized or not, there is a tendency in all education to emphasize international friendship and the ideals of peace. To this end there has been a close scrutiny of the textbooks studied to determine their influence upon youth in matters of patriotism and international outlook. And a consistent program of essay writing and oratorical contests furnishes opportunity for expressing the sentiments prompted by the trend of instruction in international goodwill.

Nevertheless, the total weight of this great body of peace sentiment is largely offset by lack of faith in its own efficiency. So long as the desire for peace qualifies its every expression with the fear that our neighbors need watching, it must serve as a poor guaranty against future wars.

A QUIET GAME OF CROQUET WHILE GUNS THUNDERED WITH TWO OLD LADIES

SOMETIMES, when I think of the days of the war, I remember a famous chateau, where we rested for a few weeks after a victorious attack—by the Germans.

It was old and strong, that castle, and it stood high on a hill above a little town. Its walls rose sheer from a deep moat, and it had a ponderous drawbridge and a courtyard was sunny and warm in that bloody spring. We could climb long narrow stairs to its topmost turrets and look out toward the smoke and thunder of the front. We could descend to dark and stinking dungeons, where the prisoners of other wars had been chained and forgotten. In the courtyard, in the sunshine, by the old well, we'd sit and scan the seams of our garments, as soldiers have always done.

The old castle was government property and its caretaker was an old and feeble man. He had two daughters, tall and lean and middle aged, and very proper and exceedingly unmarried. And one of them had an artificial leg. They looked on us as children from another land—and sometimes they'd invite us in to tea.

Outside the great gate, on a flat place above the moat, there was a little lawn. And the lawn, in quieter days had been a croquet court, which had not been used for many years. . . . We found the wickets and the balls and the mallets and persuaded the old ladies to let us use the court.

So sometimes, at dusk, a couple of American soldiers and two French ladies would have a game of croquet. We'd come in, from our duty at the front, weary and disgusted and profoundly bored with the mess of men at war—and eat and sleep and clean ourselves and wonder what to do. . . . And we'd have a game.

We were very polite and very proper and the old ladies were extremely lady-like and we were perfect gentlemen. The game was fierce and noisy and no quarter was given or asked.

But sometimes we'd look up from the rolling, clicking wooden balls and hear the heavy clamor of war and once or twice a great shell screamed overhead and landed in the streets of the village below. It was ironic, but somehow it was soothing to be playing croquet with a couple of old ladies in this little interlude of war—knowing that today we might have died, knowing that after tomorrow we might never play again.

It's a memory that does not fade, that has lingered far longer than some of the violent scenes of war. And it will last, I think, until I am older than the old ladies' father and have long ceased mentioning the war to people who were never a part of it.

Backward Glances

By A. W. Neville

J. W. FULTON was mayor of Paris in 1870 and Uncle Larkin Hunt was city marshal. I do not know who were the aldermen, but John T. Henley tells me he was one of the eight.

William Richey owned a large block of ground east of Jefferson street (now Twenty-third) running from Clarksville street north and including land where now is the Alkin high school. The old National road which passed through Paris to the month of the Klomati came in on Bonham street and crossing the square went on east on what is now Lamar avenue and turned into Pine Bluff street, then the Pine Bluff road. I presume it must have turned northeast about Jefferson street, but I have no proof of this.

At any rate, Lamar avenue had been used as a street on east to Uncle Charlie Berry's fence, just east of where is now the City Steam Laundry. Buttermilk branch had its beginning just north of there and crossed Lamar avenue about where the laundry is now. Mr. Richey had apparently never given the street through his property and one day he decided to put a fence across Lamar avenue to enclose his land, and did so.

There was indignation on the part of the people who had been using the street and the mayor instructed Marshal Hunt to tear down the fence, which the marshal did. Mr. Richey promptly rebuilt it and went to court and got an injunction to prohibit the city removing the fence. Injunctions in those days were apparently not so scary as now and after thinking the matter over Mayor Fulton told the marshal to again remove the fence and the marshal did so. Then the mayor, marshal and council were haled into court to show cause why they should not be punished for disobeying the injunction.

John C. Easton was district judge then, and after talking with him as one man to another some of the aldermen convinced him that no disrespect was intended to his court; that the street had long been used and people felt they had a right to use it; but the judge said it was too serious a matter to be overlooked entirely and concluded by fining Marshal Hunt $10 for contempt of court and letting the mayor and aldermen go without further action. I do not know if the road was left open from that time, but when I came to Paris in 1879 it was open as far as the Berry property. Some years later it was opened on to High street (now Twenty-sixth) and later was extended through the Randall property, which was part of the old Jones mansion lot, and on to the corporate limits. Then Dr. W. W. Still opened it through his large tract and the county carried it on to Blossom.

The county records show that Uncle Larkin paid the $10 fine, but I expect the city reimbursed him.

The Story of an Unemployed Girl

CHAPTER 46

Weak tea and thin slices of stale bread were passed to the twenty-seven women that morning. Enough milk to make the tea muddy had been added before the thick cups were given out. There was no butter. But by dipping the bread into the warm tea it wasn't so distasteful.

When Lillian came back from the lavatory—she had to wait in line—her suitcase had disappeared from beneath her cot. She had removed it from the top of the cot during the night to give more room. She reported her fate to the harsh-voiced matron.

"I ain't responsible, miss," she said, a gleam in her red-rimmed eyes. "I thought last night when you come here there was a lot of others needed that cot worse than you. You could have hooked that bag. I thought of that. It was a good one. I guess somebody else thought they needed it worse than you—seeing you're strong and healthy."

But instead of being infuriated because someone had taken her bag Lillian was prayerful because she had been fortunate enough to dress herself completely in her woolen dress, even had on her coat and hat, before leaving the room.

She shivered to think of herself—had she left her cot without dressing. She hoped Eve had not met with the same luck. Eve's bag was gone. Eve probably had seen her. To take it to the lavatory with her.

Lillian sat on the side of her cot and waited. "Hey, you," said the matron to Lillian, "you can't leave here without making your bed. What d'ya think? We don't have maids around here. You get a bed and your breakfast—and then you make the bed before you get out. You—with your hat on and everything ready to leave!"

Lillian looked about her. Most of the women had spread their cots neatly. She had been too worried about her bag's disappearance to notice or heed.

She started to spread the cot where she had slept. As she pulled the blanket back she found her gloves and rolled with them was a bit of paper, on which something was written.

"Dear Lillian—
"Don't worry about me. And please forgive me for taking your bag. I will pawn it for enough to take care of me for a day or two. It's too hard, seeing you do this for me. Communicate with your family. You can send a wire collect you know. If I had a family or anybody to call on I would. You have the kindest heart in the world. And I love you too much to let you do any more for me. I know you'd go home if you knew what to do with me. Goodbye—for now. EVE."

Poor little Eve!

Never saying a word about being unhappy. Always cheerful. Dependable.

"It was because I lost control," Lillian moaned, "last night. She couldn't stand to have me do that."

Lillian ran out of the close room which smelled of stale bread and tea, disinfectant. . . . echoed with moans and hollow laughter. Lillian hurried into the street. The chill wind dried the persistent flow of tears on her cheek.

"Find Eve! Catch up with her! She couldn't have gone far. The suitcase was heavy."

But hurrying, scanning the streets, brought Lillian no nearer her departed friend.

After blocks of rapid steps, breathless rushing, Lillian was forced by sheer fatigue to give up her search.

All afternoon she tried desperately hard to get a job, going to first one place, then another. Always with the same result—discouragement, heart ache.

Her feet pained. Her eyes were tired. She felt as if she hadn't slept in weeks—or eaten.

About four o'clock, hungry from the long tiresome grind, Lillian noticed a line of people near St. Vincent's hospital.

Men and women . . . old and young . . . some no more than children.

There was an aroma of freshly cooked soup . . . vegetables, meat . . . it made the walls of her empty little stomach ache. The pleasant smell of food drew that line of hungry people just as it compelled Lillian.

She stood against a lamp post and watched: "The bread line!"

There would be more than bread for that line of people. There would be delicious hot soup, flecked with nourishing vegetables, bits of meat.

Lillian started to step into line. She looked at those there . . . seedily clothed, rumpled, dirty . . . shifty eyes . . . pinched, pasty, nervous faces.

"Finally a door opened and women wearing clean white aprons, passed out bowls of soup and rolls. Some hands received the free food reverently, others greedily.

The white-aproned women reminded her suddenly of the girls the Junior League hired to run their charity bazaar kitchens in New England.

That thought stabbed Lillian's last shred of pride. She pulled up her thin shoulders under her rumpled coat, pushed a stray lock of hair back under her hat and peeked into her compact. Breathing deeply she forced her steps in the opposite direction.

"Ten cents! Two nickels! All I have . . . every cent." She turned back toward the line. The hot soup smelt so deliciously . . . so temptingly.

But again that smarting shred of pride controlled her and she forced herself around.

Some one touched her arm. "Shine, miss?" asked a mournful looking little fellow, with a child's body and a man's face. He pushed his shoe-shine box, with its iron foot toward her.

This little fellow didn't think she was one of the bread liners! He thought she could afford a shoe shine. She smiled at him.

"Shine for luck, miss!" he persisted.

Her pumps were dusty and scuffed. They were good pumps though, except for their run-over heels. She thought: "I couldn't get a job with shoes like those. And a dime won't help me, anyway . . ." She said: "Shine for a dime? It's every cent I've got."

"Okay!"

She propped her kid pumps on the iron foot. "For luck!"

But the odor of the fresh hot soup reached her up the street. With a fresh shine and a bowl of hot soup she would have courage to talk some one into giving her work . . . her steps led back toward the bread line.

She started to take a place in the line—but stomach and pride were again at odds. Pride getting the better side, she hesitated—and a hand rested on her arm. A cultured-voiced woman asked: "Why don't you, my dear?"

Lillian spoke her thoughts without intending to voice them: "I can't! I thought I could . . . I haven't the nerve . . ."

The hand, in its white kid glove, did not move from Lillian's arm. It patted. But Lillian took a few uncertain steps back.

"Perhaps I might help you?" "It's not help I want!" flared Lillian's pride. "It's work!"

Mrs. Margaret Carlton—the news papers often identified her as "one of society's leading social workers," had learned in her experience that many a girl can be good on her luck and still be a good girl. Lillian's remark was filled with meaning to her.

It was Mrs. Carlton's good will toward the unfortunate which caused her large contribution toward establishing the free food kitchen. And instead of gossiping over tea cups of squabbling over bridge tables in the afternoons Margaret Carlton usually drove down to the food kitchen to see how it was being managed.

While Lillian was being torn between pride and hunger Margaret Carlton had watched and read her from her heated and velvety limousine.

"A girl with undeniable marks of culture—pretty in a refined way, fresh, young . . ." Margaret Carlton's troubled eyes took on a new gleam as they swept over Lillian. A gleam of hope. It would take beauty and youth to help solve Margaret Carlton's problem. She would pay to use, to direct, the charm of this girl. No doubt the girl needed money and a job. And a girl so near the bread line would not be too proud.

HOLLYWOOD.—They were making a circus picture out at M. G. M. and a tourist was being shown through the studio. He stopped and talked to several of the "freaks" but was particularly interested in a sword-swallower. The tourist was amazed to learn that his newly found friend swallowed as many as ten swords a day. "Of course," he confided to the tourist, "I don't enjoy eating these swords, but it's my bread and butter."

Diet and Health

By Logan Clendening, M. D., Author of "The Human Body"

Correct posture is not only one of the most reliable visible signs of good health, but it is also one of the most important formative habits for producing health.

If you are chronically tired and fatigued, your muscles sag, your shoulders droop, your head hangs forward, your knees bend, your abdomen is compressed, you do not aerate your lungs, so you get more tired. Your poor position makes your mind the natural resting place for all the gloomy and foreboding thoughts that are around.

The teacher will insist on good posture and her influence should be supplemented at home.

First sitting posture. The school chair should be arranged so that its height will allow the feet to rest wholly upon the floor, the knee bent, at right angles and the upper leg, when the pupil is seated, will be perfectly level. The seat of the chair should not be flat, but somewhat concave. This concavity not only provides a natural hollow for the prominence of the ischial tuberosities, but tends to prevent the body from sliding forward and slouching. A school seat is required to support only the small of the back; the rest of the back is probably better left free.

The desk should be at such a distance from the seat that it is not necessary to assume an unnatural position when reading or writing. This involves simply proper height and distance from the seat. Proper lighting is also a factor in good posture.

All the requirements for a school seat and desk can be reproduced at home. Of course, we are speaking of ideal conditions and somewhat ideal children. A certain amount of slouching is inevitable. As well as curling up with a good book. Don't nag a child too much about such things; they are natural contortions and will get over it after thirty. It is only when the posture is naturally bad while standing or sitting that attention should be concentrated on it.

Such bad posture may be due to many things. One is astigmatism. The vision may be so blurred in the up and down plane that the child cocks its head and slouches in order to get the print clear.

Poor muscles of the back, or poor nutrition will also tend to cause faulty posture. Adenoids, by causing difficulty in breathing, and keeping the mouth open do the same.

Good posture, of course, can only be maintained for a short time at best and must be helped by the relief of periods of activity. Scientists say a child can stay still only twelve minutes at a time. That shows how little scientists know about it. They had in mind stone children sculptured on buildings.

Editor's Note: Four pamphlets and four articles by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each pamphlet and two cents in coin for each article, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O.

The pamphlets are: "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes" and "Feminine Hygiene." The articles are "Normal Diet," "Diet of the Expectant Mother," "Tuberculosis" and "The Atonic Abdominal Wall."

My New York

By James Ancell

NEW YORK.—Not that it matters: There was never a time when radio was more anxious for fresh ideas and talent, and never a time when it was more difficult for an unknown outsider to get an audition that really means anything. . . . I believe the studios sincerely want to overcome this lack of accessibility, but the very opulence and size of the industry makes it hard for the man with something first-rate to market his product . . .

Coming-out parties for new comedians are frequently elaborate and often amusing evenings. . . . At one of these radio blowouts the other evening, held in a midtown gymnasium, with tables ringed around a square circle, one speaker tripped into a rather startling faux pas . . .

He was the man whose skit had been sold to a big sponsor . . . He wanted to say something cleverly complimentary about the chief time seller for the radio chain which had placed his work. . . . He cried: "Blank, there, is a great guy. He got twice as much for my skit as I'd asked." . . . The head of the firm which had paid the price was present and flashed at the time venter a look of indignant surprise . . .

Several midtown hotels are presenting celebrities with rent free suites and advertising the fact that the big shots are ensconced with them. . . . Borrowing the idea, all-night eateries along the Rialto are printing lists of luminaries accustomed to sitting at their tables. . . .

And it is whispered that more than one notable with more fame than cash is glad to munch a steak sandwich now and then gratis . . . Claudette Colbert told me that while she was in New York a lingerie shop dispatched an emissary to her apartment bearing a load of silken fluff and finery in one hand and a camera in the other . . . Claudette was too amused to be indignant . . . Of course, she turned the stuff down . . .

Understanding Unnecessary
There are, as you undoubtedly know, plenty of movie theaters in Manhattan which specialize in foreign language talking pictures. The assumption might be that these talkies in other tongues are aimed at the foreign born elements of the town: The fact is, foreigners who speak little or no English seem to prefer straight American flickers, while the patronage of the French, German and Hungarian made films is drawn from the Park avenue crowd who don't have to understand what's going on in order to be happy, provided they are doing the "smart" thing.

Ladies and gentlemen in evening dress flock to the intimate and arty theaters in the side streets to see such production as "Il Est Charmant," which depends on delicate Parisian word-plays for its humor and offers little sense even to advanced students of French. They laugh politely at junctures where jokes are clearly located, and feel very much in the swim.

Be Patient
Recommended to students of This Leony Town are the plain, even slightly wistful, cards displayed by the Eighth street service line.

These tracts are lengthy and deal with the probable perfection of traffic control in the metropolis, 100 years hence. They wind up with the exhortation to customers not to lose their tempers over delays in the meantime!

Art for Eat's Sake
Greenwich Village these days is more reminiscent of Paris than it has been for a long time. On a reconnaissance trek through the district the other afternoon I encountered several bearded and velvet-jacketed Bohemians presiding over sidewalk shows of their work in water colors and oils.

I remarked the absence of the usual number of nudes in the display. The artist-hawker said with dignity: "That's the trouble with police in a bourgeois civilization. They do not understand nudes!"

Uptown, however, in Broadway, there is an exhibition of nothing except nudes in a cubicle hung with black velvet, dimly lighted and heavy with an Oriental lushness of atmosphere. To see bad copies of classic oils, men pay 15 cents a peep.

PERSONAL ADVICE

By Virginia Lee

"Dear Virginia Lee: You have been so much help to others that I am going to ask you to help me. I am a widow and in comfortable circumstances. I own my own home and car. I always have done as I pleased, being allowed all the freedom in the world.

I have been recently asked to marry an old friend of mine, who is four years younger than myself. He is very jealous of me and does not believe in my going out as I do with the car alone, and always says that if I were his wife I would have none of my former privileges.

Please advise me, Miss Lee, as you have others. Do you think I could be happy under these circumstances? S.E.A."

If your friend means what he says I can't imagine that you would be happy at all, married to him, S. E. A.

After years of freedom to have a man nagging about where you have been and what you have been doing and with whom you have been would be simply torture. You wouldn't stand it, I'm sure.

Your friend probably would deeply resent any curtailment of his freedom after marriage or before. Why should he try to limit yours?

Tell him that unless he cares enough about you to trust you and allow you the liberty of action becoming to a responsible human being, you must decline his kind invitation to be his wife.

If you wed him you may learn to your sorrow that it is sometimes better to be a little lonely than continually hampered in your movements by some one who claims to love you.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: We are in a quandary as to the advisability of corresponding with a boy friend. We are uncertain whether it is proper for a girl to write first to a boy whom she does not know very well.

"LUE and SUE."

That depends on circumstances away. If you have been visiting girls from home and the boy in question has helped to give you a good time, you would on arriving home write and thank him. But if you are merely planning to start a correspondence and the boy has not asked you to write to him, I should think you had better not.
